

Congressman Pence spoke with FOX Fort Wayne about the Supreme Court's recent ruling on gun rights . An excerpt from the interview:

Indiana gun laws are already more lenient than in other states, but it doesn't mean last week's Supreme Court decision won't have an effect on local communities. According to Congressman Mike Pence, there might be a couple cities that could review laws in the wake of the new ruling.

"The protections enshrined in the Bill of Rights, in the 2nd Amendment, restrain not only the Federal Government from denying law abiding citizens the right to keep and bear arms," began the Congressman.

"It also constrains local government and cities from being able to pass ordinances that would restrict the ability of Hoosiers, law abiding Hoosiers, to keep and bear arms," he continued.
